Bulosan, in spite of these oppressive conditions, educated himself and became a writer. He chronicled his life and times in an autobiographical novel, America is in the Heart. He helped organize unions and fought for equality in a racist society until his death in September, 1956.

While the ugly racism that Bulosan experienced is not as blatant in Canada, the roots of it lie intact beneath the surface of layered civility and systemic structures.

Part of our task as a cultural group is to dig out the truth and make changes, assert the uniqueness of our Philippine heritage and our struggle as a people.

In this spirit, our theatre group is named after Carlos Bulosan.
